The series of Ohio State-Denison Mathematics Conferences, first organized in the 1960's by Hans Zassenhaus, are held in even-numbered years in Ohio, with the group theorists meeting in the odd-numbered years at various locations around the country. The even-numbered year conferences held in Ohio originally included group theory, ring theory, and combinatorics (areas in which Hans Zassenhaus was active), but in recent years only group and ring theory have been in attendance.
