

Summer/winter courses outside the U.S. are generally not approved

The Department of Mathematics and Statistics generally does not approve transfer credit for courses taken outside the United States that are not part of a regular degree-granting curriculum (in particular, standalone summer or winter courses abroad).

Exceptions may be made for courses taken through approved programs and institutions, including programs organized by or affiliated with Binghamton University (for example, BU study-abroad programs and courses offered by BU partner institutions).

We will continue to review transfer-credit requests for:

- courses taken in the United States, and
- courses taken outside the United States as part of a regular degree-granting curriculum (for example, coursework completed while enrolled full-time at a foreign university prior to transferring to Binghamton).
